Amy advises employers on retirement plans, health and welfare plans, compensation packages and other benefits.

Amy assists clients with a variety of plan qualification and compliance issues. She combines her systematic research and her experience preparing IRS filings to provide her clients with solutions to employee benefit questions and concerns.

Amy graduated from Washington University School of Law in 2018. While in law school, Amy was the Chief Executive Articles Editor for the Washington University Journal of Law and Policy. She also gained practical legal experience by working as student attorney in the law school's Low Income Taxpayer Clinic and by serving as a judicial intern for the Honorable Sarah Evans Barker in the United States District Court for the Southern District of Indiana.
