Brandi is a partner in the Business Litigation practice area where she focuses her practice on defending corporate clients in class action and complex commercial litigation matters.

She has successfully defended clients in state and federal courts across the country in matters ranging from consumer fraud, securities, data breach and tax class action litigation to complex commercial contract disputes, business tort claims and shareholder and fiduciary litigation. Brandi also represents corporate and other policyholder clients with their insurance recovery efforts, assisting clients at every stage of the process from initial coverage analysis through litigation.

Recognizing that a genuine understanding of a client's business is crucial to effectively representing the client and obtaining the best results, Brandi takes the time to listen to clients, learn about their businesses and the people, products and relationships involved, and works with clients to create a litigation plan that is specifically tailored to meet each client's needs.
