Liz assists clients with a wide variety of business litigation matters, including antitrust, false advertising, and trade regulation.

She performs legal research, drafts and reviews pleadings and other documents, supports case management, and assists with client communications for advice to food, beverage and consumer product and service companies regarding existing or proposed advertising materials, including product packaging, labeling and distribution materials, and social media and website content, as well as analyzing similar competitor materials and comparative advertising campaigns. She supports defending clients in consumer class actions alleging unfair and deceptive practices and false advertising relating to customer agreements and disclosures, product labeling, advertising, and online sales.

Prior to joining Thompson Coburn LLP, Liz served as a Judicial Law Clerk to the Honorable Irma C. Ramirez of the United States District Court, Northern District of Texas. While working toward earning her J.D., Liz completed a Legal Externship with the Honorable Patrick J. Walsh and a Litigation Internship/Externship at AT&T. Liz also served as a Teaching Assistant and Editor-in-Chief for the Journal of Art, Technology and Intellectual Property.
