Jason is a trusted legal advisor to multi-generational families and their businesses.

Drawing on his extensive background in tax, estate planning and business succession, he counsels family members on a wide variety of legal and business issues, helping them transfer wealth, save millions in taxes, and pursue new opportunities.

In addition, Jason often helps family members and their businesses with legal needs in a wide variety of other areas, including real estate, intellectual property, litigation, corporate law and labor and employment, by connecting family members and their businesses to Thompson Coburn's full range of legal services. He also works closely and collaboratively with the business' executives and the family's team of advisors, including accountants, financial planners, and insurance agents.

Available to his clients 24/7, Jason uses his unique insight into the family and its business to proactively anticipate legal needs and provide a personalized slate of options and solutions to problems. He helps clients evaluate individual interests and achieve business or personal milestones that are aligned with the overarching values of the family and its business. Jason cares deeply about each family member's separate — and collective — priorities and what they want to achieve for themselves and for future generations. Simply put, their goals become his goals.

Jason is Co-Chair of the Firm's Tax and Private Client Practice Group, and Co-Chair of the Private Client Practice Area.
