A dynamic litigator with a breadth of experience, Kacey creates and executes effective and practical litigation strategies to address a variety of complex disputes for clients, from members of the Fortune 500 and large privately held companies to smaller businesses.

Aggressive and methodical in her approach, Kacey leads complex litigation in a focused manner that is consistent with her clients' business goals and strategic objectives. She represents clients in state, federal and appellate courts as well as before various dispute resolution agencies. She has prevailed in state and federal courts and has successfully arbitrated and mediated numerous cases before the AAA and other dispute resolution agencies.

Kacey is a talented writer who has been professionally published on various legal topics. She also serves on the editorial boards for two publications, Bender's Labor & Employment Bulletin and Bender's California Labor & Employment Bulletin.

Prior to joining Thompson Coburn, Kacey was an Associate at Chapman, Glucksman, Dean, Roeb & Barger, where her practice focused on professional liability for accountants and business managers, construction defect litigation for builders and developers, and insurance defense.
