Spenser helps real estate clients navigate complicated transactional matters, including commercial acquisitions and sales, tax credits, and real estate finance.

He supports case management, conducts legal research, assists with client communication, and drafts legal documents.

A native of Albuquerque, New Mexico, Spenser worked as a legal assistant and paralegal for a solo practitioner during his undergrad studies at the University of New Mexico. In law school, he was editor in chief of the Washington University Jurisprudence Review, served as a mock trial judge for the university's undergraduate mock trial program, co-founded the Community Development, Housing, and Real Estate Law Society, and was a member of the Black Law Students Association.
