Suzanne is a litigation associate in the firm's environmental group.

She assists clients with managing environmental risks and liabilities under state and federal environmental laws, including communicating with regulators on issues related to CERCLA and state law equivalents. Suzanne supports clients in all phases of the litigation process, including document review, deposition preparation, expert witness strategy, and post-trial briefings.

Suzanne received her J.D. from The George Washington University Law School, in which she worked on The George Washington University Law Review, participated in the Environmental & Energy Law Association, and served as its president. She also was a student attorney for the Small Business & Community Economic Development Clinic.

She earned her undergraduate degree from Loyola University Chicago, cum laude, with a B.S. in Environmental Science and minors in Political Science and Spanish.
