My passion about the value of work drives me to intently analyze clients' employees, products, and services to provide them with effective litigation and counseling support.

overview

Hannah Lustman-Rodriguez represents employers of all sizes in litigation and human resources counseling.

She applies meticulous research and writing skills to prepare legal pleadings for matters in state and federal courts. Hannah has also experience representing employers in alternative dispute resolution.

In addition, Hannah helps clients respond to investigations and charges of discrimination by interfacing with local, state, and federal agencies including the EEOC, NLRB, and OSHA. When counseling HR professionals, Hannah strives to understand their organization on a deeper level in order to help them craft policies that address evolving employer obligations while fitting their unique business models.

in my free time

I am a proud graduate of Washington University and the University of Kansas. I enjoy staying involved at both schools by volunteering for alumni initiatives, judging moot court rounds, and cheering at basketball games. On weekends, my husband and I love to seek out the best coffee and breakfast burritos around town.
