I bring unique perspectives to the table both from my experience with business litigation and my work in civil rights and constitutional litigation.

overview

Vidya Dindiya focuses on complex litigation, representing financial institutions, corporations, and fiduciaries in state and federal court actions.

Before joining Thompson Coburn, Vidya litigated at a global law firm and enforced high-profile antitrust cases involving major corporations.

Vidya maintains a strong civil rights and constitutional litigation practice, representing clients before the Inter-American Court of Human Rights, the African Court on Human and Peoples' Rights, and various United Nations bodies. She has advocated in federal court on issues such as the death penalty, abortion criminalization, and gender-based violence.

During law school, she served as a student attorney for the International Human Rights Law Clinic and worked in the Civil Rights Division of the U.S. Department of Justice and the ACLU's Human Rights Program. Before law school, Vidya was a program associate for the Ford Foundation's Democracy, Rights, and Justice initiative, focusing on women's human rights and sexual and reproductive health and rights globally and domestically.
